1. The attached sketch was drawn from a town plan of Riga, which was printed in Riga before the occupation of Latvia by the Soviets.
2. The Dzeltilts bridge across the Daugava River is a railway bridge and open to pedestrain traffic only. Further downstream there is a pontoon bridge which is open to vehicular traffic.
3. The Soviets have recently constructed a large bridge which is capable of carrying heavy traffic. (See attached sketch on which the approximate location of the bridge has been drawn in)
4. The Soviets have expanded the Riga airfield which is now about three times its original size. (See attached sketch on which the approximate area of the expanded field has been drawn in).
